THE KREOVIX CREATOR PLAYBOOK

Make Your Personal Brand Grow

A practical guide to building your presence, creating better content, shooting with confidence and growing an audience that trusts you.

BUILD A BRAND PEOPLE RECOGNISE • TRUST • REMEMBER

Positioning → Content → Shooting → Editing → Distribution → Improvement

For creators, founders, experts and professionals who want to turn their knowledge and personality into a recognisable personal brand.

Before you start: build a brand, not just a page

A personal brand is the impression people repeatedly form about you through your ideas, expertise, personality and work. It is not simply a logo, aesthetic feed or follower count.

Your goal is to become recognisable for a clear subject and useful point of view. People should understand who you help, what you talk about and why they should keep listening.

THE PERSONAL BRAND EQUATION

Clarity — people know what you stand for.
Consistency — they see and hear from you regularly.
Credibility — your content demonstrates real knowledge or experience.
Connection — your personality makes the brand human.
Repetition — your key message becomes memorable.

The first 3 questions to answer

1. What do you want to be known for?
2. Who do you want to attract or help?
3. What change, insight or value can you consistently give them?

> Do not try to be interesting to everyone. Be relevant to a specific audience first.

1. Find your positioning

Your positioning is the clear space you want to own in your audience's mind. It guides your bio, topics, examples, visuals and offers.

Use this simple positioning statement:

I help [specific audience] achieve [specific outcome] through [your method / expertise].

Example positioning

"I help personal brand coaches and creators turn their ideas into short-form videos that hold attention through storytelling-led editing."

Choose 3–4 content pillars

1. Expertise: teach what you know, explain processes and solve audience problems.
2. Proof: show results, case studies, work in progress and lessons from experience.
3. Perspective: share opinions, mistakes, beliefs and industry observations.
4. Personal: show the person behind the work, your routines, interests and journey.

Keep your pillars connected to one central identity. Random topics make it harder for people to understand what to expect from you.

2. Make your profile easy to understand

When someone visits your profile, they should quickly understand who you are, what you offer and what to do next.

Profile checklist

NAME FIELD — include your name and a searchable role or topic where natural.

BIO — say who you help, what value you provide and one clear next step.

PINNED POSTS — introduce yourself, show your best proof and explain your core value.

HIGHLIGHTS — organise testimonials, services, FAQs, work and useful resources.

LINK — send visitors to one relevant destination, not a confusing list.

A simple bio formula

Line 1: Who you help + outcome
Line 2: Your method, expertise or proof
Line 3: Clear call to action

> Avoid vague bios such as “Dreamer | Creator | Hustler”. Replace them with specific information that helps the right person decide to follow.

3. How to grow your personal brand

Growth comes from repeatedly publishing relevant content, making it easy to discover, building relationships and learning from audience response. There is no guaranteed viral formula.

The growth loop

RESEARCH → identify audience questions and recurring problems.

CREATE → turn one problem into a useful, clear piece of content.

PUBLISH → use a strong opening, clear message and relevant format.

ENGAGE → reply thoughtfully, ask questions and join relevant conversations.

LEARN → review retention, shares, saves, profile visits and meaningful enquiries.

Practical growth habits

- Publish on a sustainable schedule you can maintain.
- Make content around specific audience problems, not only what you feel like posting.
- Use searchable language naturally in captions and on-screen text.
- Collaborate with people who share your audience or values.
- Repurpose strong ideas into a Reel, carousel, story and longer post.
- Spend time engaging with relevant accounts, not buying engagement.

Focus on audience fit and trust—not vanity metrics alone.

4. What should you post?

A strong content mix helps new people discover you, helps existing followers trust you and gives interested viewers a reason to take action.

Five useful content formats

TEACH: explain a process, answer a common question or share a practical framework.
STORY: tell a personal lesson, turning point, mistake or behind-the-scenes moment.
PROOF: show a project, result, testimonial or before-and-after with honest context.
OPINION: explain what you believe, challenge a misconception or share a thoughtful industry view.
INVITATION: explain how people can work with you, join your community or take the next step.

Idea prompts

- 3 mistakes beginners make when ____
- What I wish I knew before starting ____
- How I approach ____ step by step
- A project I worked on and what it taught me
- The difference between ____ and ____
- Behind the scenes of how I create ____
- One unpopular opinion I have about ____
- If I had to start again from zero, I would ____

One idea can become multiple posts. Change the angle, example or format rather than repeating the exact same post.

5. Structure videos that hold attention

Do not start filming before you know the one message the viewer should remember. A short video still needs a beginning, a clear middle and a payoff.

THE 5-PART SHORT-FORM STORY

1. HOOK: earn attention with a specific problem, claim or question.

2. CONTEXT: give only the background viewers need.

3. CONFLICT: show the mistake, challenge or tension.

4. TURNING POINT: reveal the insight, action or change.

5. PAYOFF: deliver the lesson, result or next step.

Example script skeleton

Hook: “Your videos may not need better transitions. They may need a clearer story.”
Context: “A lot of creators focus on effects before deciding what the video is actually saying.”
Conflict: “So the edit becomes busy, but the message is still difficult to follow.”
Turning point: “Start by writing one sentence that explains the point of the video.”
Payoff: “Then use every shot, caption and cut to support that one idea.”

Keep the promise of the hook. Never use a dramatic opening that the rest of the video fails to deliver.

6. How to shoot better content

Good shooting is not about owning the most expensive camera. It is about clear audio, controlled light, stable framing and footage that supports the message.

Before you record

- Clean the lens and check storage and battery.
- Choose a quiet location and reduce background noise.
- Face a window or soft light; avoid a bright window directly behind you.
- Put the camera at eye level and leave a little headroom.
- Look at the lens when speaking to the viewer.
- Record a short test and check focus, exposure and audio.

Simple talking-head setup

CAMERA: phone or camera on a tripod, vertical 9:16 for Reels and Shorts.

LIGHT: soft light facing you, slightly off-centre for natural dimension.

AUDIO: use a lavalier or external mic where possible; monitor for echo and clipping.

BACKGROUND: tidy, relevant and not distracting.

DELIVERY: speak in short thought groups, pause between takes and keep your energy natural.

Record each section in separate takes if that helps you stay clear and confident. Leave a short pause before and after each line for easier editing.

7. Shoot B-roll that adds meaning

B-roll is supporting footage layered over your main audio. It should help viewers understand, feel or visualise what you are saying—not simply decorate the edit.

Useful B-roll shots

WIDE: establish the location or environment.
MEDIUM: show you working, speaking or interacting.
CLOSE-UP: capture hands, tools, screens, details and expressions.
PROCESS: show the steps behind your work.
RESULT: show the finished output or outcome.

How to capture usable B-roll

- Record each action for 5–10 seconds, even if you only use 1–2 seconds.
- Capture a wide, medium and close-up angle of important actions.
- Keep movements slow and intentional.
- Hold the shot steady at the start and end.
- Shoot extra cutaways for edits, pauses and transitions.
- Make sure the footage matches the spoken point.

> Example: If you say “I plan every video before editing,” show yourself writing a hook, reviewing a shot list, arranging clips and checking the final timeline.

Do not add random cinematic shots that distract from the message. Relevance beats decoration.

8. Edit and publish with intention

Editing should make the message easier to follow. It should not compete with the message.

Editing checklist

- Remove unnecessary pauses, repetition and distracting mistakes.
- Keep captions accurate, readable and timed to speech.
- Use clean cuts and only add transitions when they help the story.
- Keep music below the voice and check the mix on phone speakers.
- Use visual changes to support important points, not every sentence.
- Check spelling, names, claims and the final export before publishing.

Publishing checklist

- Write a clear caption that adds context or invites a useful response.
- Use a relevant cover title that communicates the topic.
- Add a direct CTA: save, share, comment, follow or enquire—choose one main action.
- Use relevant keywords naturally; avoid unrelated hashtags and keyword stuffing.
- Share the post to Stories and respond to genuine comments.

Review performance

> Look beyond views. Check average watch time and retention where available, shares, saves, comments, profile visits, follows and qualified enquiries. Compare similar formats over time and use the results to guide the next test.

9. What NOT to do

These habits can weaken clarity, trust or consistency. Avoid them even when they seem like shortcuts to fast growth.

DON’T BUY FOLLOWERS OR ENGAGEMENT. It distorts your data and does not create a real community.

DON’T COPY SOMEONE ELSE’S IDENTITY. Learn from formats, but use your own experience, examples and voice.

DON’T POST WITHOUT A PURPOSE. Know the audience, message and intended action for each post.

DON’T CHASE EVERY TREND. Use trends only when they fit your positioning and audience.

DON’T OVER-EDIT. Effects, sound effects and captions cannot rescue a confusing idea.

DON’T MAKE CLAIMS YOU CAN’T SUPPORT. Be accurate about results, credentials and client work.

DON’T DISAPPEAR AFTER POSTING. Community building requires genuine interaction.

DON’T EXPECT INSTANT RESULTS. Review progress over a meaningful period and keep improving.

Consistency is not posting every day at any cost. It is keeping a realistic promise to your audience and delivering value reliably.
